As an Alien, objectively observing your World economic situation, there is really only one way to describe it---A Divisive Mess! As long as you have the vast majority of wealth in the hands of a relatively few humans....then you have a failed economic system. When you have humans with private jets, many homes, and multiple cars, while there are other humans dying of starvation and living in abject poverty by the millions....then you have a failed economic system. When too many people make money merely dividing goods---and are far removed from the actual production; when too many people make a living by profiting from money, legal, and paperwork transactions, then you have a failed economic system.

The United States, as an example, was once a country with large reserves of natural resources, a small population, and a people who valued hard work. As a result, it had a growing, robust economy. But now you have farmers paid "not" to grow crops; and middle-men (who have no intention of accepting delivery of products--the futures market.) driving the price of goods up by greedy speculation. Lawyers, Bankers, Stock Brokers, etc. make their money by "shuffling paper" rather than being an integral part of the production of goods. When a large part of the gross domestic product of a country consists--not of doing something useful---but producing financial transactions, that country's economy becomes a house of cards waiting to collapse. America has become a country whose work force is teeming with middle-men and greedy opportunists. Now that America is importing more goods than exporting; and there are too many in the population trying to squeeze money out of every transaction without ever actually doing anything productive—the country has a failing economy.

Wall Street, as it now exists, needs to be abolished. If someone wants to invest in a stock, they should send the money directly to that company and receive the stock certificates themselves. There should be no Futures Market unless it is restructured to represent only the parties actually involved in the production or buying of goods. These institutions are merely a form of legalized gambling with no real redeeming economic value. No economic model that is presently used by any of your countries will ultimately work. Why?--Because they too easily facilitate greed and dishonesty to flourish.

How does a country rationalize paying their own leaders only a fraction of the amount received by sports figures and Hollywood actors? How did it come to be that men who hit home runs or throw touchdowns (and are basically just playing a game that they love) make millions of dollars, while your teachers are barely getting by on their salaries? Popular singers, artists, and designers can become multi millionaires almost “overnight” while plumbers and electricians can barely support their families. I assure you that when your world economies really begin to fail, the people that grow food and fix machines will be much more highly regarded than someone who designs a stylish party dress.

Because Earth has finally moved into the “Information Age”, there are no more isolated countries that can disregard the interaction of all the other peoples of your world. What does this mean? Listen Carefully: There has to be one single currency that has the same value everywhere. There must be one monetary system that all nations adhere to. Trade restrictions and tariffs need to be eliminated. Outrageous salaries for non-productive entertainment and sports figures have to be curtailed. Health care should be free for all. Education should be free. These are non-negotiable concepts that must be implemented and adhered to or your world will be forever mired in war and discord. If Humanity is to survive, you must band together to become “One World People” (at least in the economic sense) to share the resources of your Earth.
